(57) A public transport services safety system includes a platform for transmitting information from a sender to an identified recipient. The system comprises a unique code activated on a mobile phone network that sends information via the platform, and a registration number assigned to each driver of a public service vehicle. Passengers can report incidents by activating the code and entering the driver's registration number, with the information relayed to designated recipients such as transport authorities or vehicle owners.

(57) AI systems for image processing and analysis have seen significant advancements in recent years, primarily leveraging convolutional neural networks (CNNs) and vision transformers. Vision language models are models that can learn simultaneously from images and texts to tackle many tasks, from visual question answering to image captioning. In this post, we go through the main building blocks of vision language models: have an overview, grasp how they work, figure out how to find the right model, how to use them for inference and how to easily fine-tune them. These systems can identify objects, recognizing patterns, and extracting textual information from images. However, the integration of these capabilities with large language models for enhanced context understanding and reasoning is still in its nascent stages.

(57) The Block Chain-Powered Land Titles Registry is an innovative platform designed to digitize land records and secure them from manipulation. By utilizing block chain technology, it ensures tamper-proof, immutable records, enhancing transparency, trust, and data security. The platform captures critical landownership particulars in a structured digital format and allows users to upload digital copies of title deeds and other support documentation. These land records are securely stored using a specially coded storage contracts anchored on the block chain, which guarantee immutability and facilitate traceability. A unique transaction hash is then issued as proof of records verification and storage on the blockchain. These hash is subsequently used to confirm and retrieve the transaction from the block chain. Although the platform is not presently focused on supporting property transactional, it is nevertheless equipped to handle peer-to-peer land property ownership transfers. Once successfully concluded, records on the block chain are promptly updated to reflect any changes effected, including ownership transfers. This practical solution addresses inefficiencies, reduces fraud risks, and empowers economic growth by enabling secure, digital land transactions. It aligns with sustainable urban development goals, offering a scalable framework for modernizing land registry systems globally

(57) The present invention relates to a method of enhancing equipment maintenance by providing a fast, safe and cost effective jig for extracting shrink fitted and seized couplings and gears. The jig was designed with a C64 (3.2MW) overhead cooling tower motor and gearbox and generator coupling in mind. This jig has become a frequently used tool by the maintenance team because of the frequent inevitable need to dismantle these components during maintenance. Each 3.2 MW Power plant has 4 cooling tower motor- gearbox assemblies and one load generator. Every time one of these equipment undergoes maintenance the portable multipurpose has to be mounted for the extraction process. Prior to this invention the extraction process would be contracted out and these large components had to be ferried to an external workshop for extraction via a different method of pressing and drilling, thereby incurring large equipment down time and high maintenance costs. The drilling process would also weaken the gears. The jig is also fabricated from vanadium enriched plates to ensure that it can withstand a pulling force of over 150 tons capable of extracting highly seized components without experiencing fatigue failure. Different sizes of hydraulic jacks can also be mounted on demand basis depending on available hydraulic jacks. The jig also operates alongside a set of packings to ensure compensation of shorter lengths of jacks.

Oz Pole Fence Posts (105), constructed from galvanized steel with anti-theft features, serve as the primary structural elements. The high-tensile Flow Oz Wire (102),suspended between posts using SIFS Clips (104), enables electrification for livestock control or security purposes. The SIFS End Assembly (SIFSEA) provides anchoring and structural stability through durable steel components. The modular design of SIFS ensures easy installation ,adaptability to uneven terrain, and resistance to environmental degradation, making it a versatile and long-lasting solution for a wide range of fencing needs. The system's combination of durability, adaptability, and electrification capabilities makes it ideal for use in harsh outdoor conditions.

(54) Title: GEO MAPPING SYSTEM UNDER DATA MINING (57) The Geo-Mapping System (GMS) is an advanced platform designed to optimize property management through real-time data analysis, predictive analytics, and interactive geo-mapping. By leveraging geospatial technologies and data mining techniques, the GMS enables property managers to visualize property performance, market trends, and tenant behavior across various locations. The system integrates historical data to forecast demand shifts, adjust rental prices, and plan investments strategically. It streamlines tenant management by automating administrative tasks like rent collection, lease renewals, and maintenance scheduling, improving operational efficiency and tenant satisfaction. Additionally, the GMS supports seamless integration with external platforms, such as government databases, financial institutions, and property listing services, enhancing its functionality and ensuring regulatory compliance. With its robust analytics and intuitive interface, the GMS provides property managers with actionable insights for making informed decisions, reducing vacancy rates, and optimizing property portfolios, setting a new standard in modern property management.
